NINJAS STEM FOUNDATION

Outreach Committee & Event Operations Policy

Committee responsibilities, Board oversight, and external program coordination

1. Purpose and relationship to the Bylaws

Ninjas STEM Foundation ("NSF") coordinates educational outreach, community events, sponsorship-related communications, and partnerships through duly authorized organizational roles. This Policy establishes a workable process for the Outreach Committee and community event operations. It must be read together with NSF's operative Bylaws, Financial Management Policy, Youth Protection & Safety Policy, Code of Conduct, Privacy Statement, and Program Operating Procedures.

The October 2026 bylaw review draft proposes an Outreach Committee under Texas Business Organizations Code §22.219 as an operational/advisory committee. That proposal has not, by this document, been adopted. This Policy takes effect only following valid approval and designation of the Committee or other responsible program personnel.

2. Establishment, membership, and reporting

The Board establishes the Committee by an appropriate resolution and records its membership, chair, Board liaison, term, and delegated tasks. Under the current proposed design, the Committee has at least two adult members; this is an NSF policy proposal, not a statutory minimum for an advisory committee under §22.219. Student volunteers may assist but do not satisfy the adult-member minimum.

The Board retains corporate management and oversight. Neither appointment as Committee Chair nor assignment as Board liaison confers an additional corporate vote or independent contractual, financial, or personnel authority. The Chair coordinates work; the Board approves material program priorities, budget allocations, and reserved commitments.

For each regular Board meeting, the Committee provides a concise written report on upcoming programs, completed events, proposed partners, approved spending against budget, results, risks, and decisions requested.

3. Functions and division of work

Workstream	Responsible functions
Documents and communications	Coordinate event applications, program descriptions, educational presentations, sponsor and host materials, public website/social drafts, factual verification and publication routing.
Partnerships and activities	Maintain host contacts and outreach calendar; coordinate approved dates, volunteers, venue conditions, supplies, equipment, registration, follow-up and contingencies.
Educational integration	Consult responsible coach or program lead on student tasks, readiness, student-centered requirements, age appropriateness and supervision.
Fundraising support	Identify potential sponsors/grants, prepare drafts, coordinate with Treasurer; submit sponsor benefits, solicitations or restricted commitments through required approvals.
Results and records	Maintain program files and supported impact metrics, document event results, and hand over records when assignments change.

4. Authority and approvals

The Committee may complete routine scheduling, draft preparation, host communications, and distribution of approved materials within a written, existing delegation. An internal Committee recommendation or vote is not automatically a Board action.

Any new binding host or sponsor agreement, expenditure, grant commitment, fundraising campaign, promised benefit, use of restricted funds, insurance undertaking, or other reserved corporate action requires the approval specified by the operative Bylaws and Financial Management Policy. Committee service alone does not authorize holding organizational funds, using NSF's tax identification number for an independent team, promising refunds, or signing material agreements.

Each external document must have a designated preparer and appropriate reviewer. Programmatic accuracy, student work and educational readiness fall within the coach's delegated supervision; organizational approval of external commitments follows the relevant Foundation authority. When adults disagree, they resolve the issue directly or refer it to the appropriate Foundation decision-maker rather than pass inconsistent instructions to a student.

5. Outreach document review and publication

For every material host application, flyer, website update, presentation, or public claim, record the document owner, audience, sources, factual checks, relevant permissions, required approval, submission date, and final approved version.

Publicity must accurately identify whether an event is planned, confirmed, or completed. Donor acknowledgments, funding promises, outcome statistics, and partner endorsements require appropriate approval and evidentiary support. Third-party logos and images may be used only with relevant permission. Identifiable child media must satisfy the applicable consent policy.

6. Host relationships and event preparation

Every external event should have one NSF Event Lead, one host contact, a written description of objectives and delivery format, identified supervising adults, a resource check, and a documented go/no-go decision. The Event Lead coordinates venue terms, accessibility, registration, safeguarding, emergency logistics, media rules, equipment, and cancellation conditions.

A school, library, city, PTA, recreation center, or private host may impose additional screening, insurance, facility, or advertising rules. If a program may constitute regulated childcare or a youth camp, the Foundation shall assess relevant licensing requirements before announcing or operating it.

7. Program records and measurable impact

After each activity, the Event Lead records the location, date, format, host, student and adult staffing, educational objectives, approximate or verified attendance, teaching time, any incident/near miss, direct costs, outcomes, and follow-up.

Impact reporting must distinguish unique students from total attendances and adults from youth participants; repeat hosts from first-time hosts; and instructional/volunteer hours from mere presence. Do not count the same event or cost twice because two NSF teams participated. Public figures shall be tied to records and labeled as estimates where appropriate.

8. Continuity, safety, and prospective effect

Foundation outreach emails, attachments, applications, permissions, approval records, host contacts, files, and approved deliverables shall be stored in designated Foundation repositories accessible to at least two authorized adults where appropriate. Departing volunteers shall promptly transfer pending assignments and Foundation business records without surrendering unrelated personal passwords.

No Committee procedure replaces youth-protection or mandatory external reporting duties. Relevant records must be preserved in the event of anticipated or pending proceedings. These rules govern future Committee operations only and do not establish the authority or validity of prior disputed actions. The Board should document Committee appointments and authority in a resolution or charter, adopt a work plan and budget, identify publication and records responsibilities, and review the arrangement at least annually. Operational checklists appear in NSF-CP-05 and the internal forms packet.
